How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

Performance Overview

Dynamic Alpha Macro Fund ("DYMIX" or "The Fund") underperformed the Standard & Poor's 500 Index ("S&P 500") for the period from July 31st, 2023, through June 30th, 2024. Versus the newly added supplemental benchmark, the Barclay Global Macro Index, the fund outperformed. Overall, the fund returned 15.18% for the inception period ended June 30th, 2024, compared to the S&P 500 and Barclay Global Macro Indices which returned 20.68% and 8.07% respectively.

Primary Benchmark Overview

The S&P 500 was led primarily by contributions from technology and communication services. There was little volatility in the equity index to speak of.

Market Factors, Contributors and Detractors Impacting Fund Performance

As the fund is structured with two differing strategies, impacts will be discussed as such:

Strategic Equities

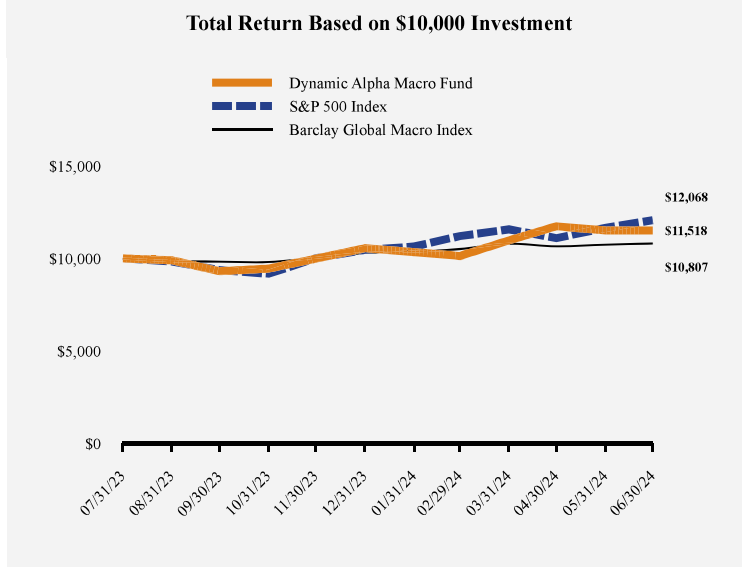

Allocations to strategic equities were broadly positive, led by allocations to growth-oriented exchange traded funds (ETFs). Core and dividend/value ETFs were also positive, but less than growth allocations.

Fundamental Global Macro Strategy ("Macro strategy")

The biggest factors impacting performance of the macro strategy were related to the market's anticipation of Federal Reserve Rate cuts. Going into 2024 the market had anticipated several (as many as 6-7) rate cuts in 2024 by the Fed Open Market Committee. But as inflation persisted, these rate cuts continued to get pushed further and further into the future (with some anticipating no cuts at all). The impact of this has been continued volatility in fixed income markets as well as volatility in inflation and economic related commodities (gold, silver, copper etc.).

Overall, Gold was by far the biggest contributor to performance from the macro strategy. Other smaller contributors included Copper, Sugar, and the Swiss Franc. Macro strategy detractors from performance included equity index shorts as well as positions in coffee, silver, cocoa, corn and treasuries.
